Course Description

Compelling campaigns can grab the attention of the media, organized interest groups, and average citizens who rarely pay attention to politics. Moreover, elections give citizens a chance to voice their opinions and to hold elected representatives accountable.

This course will explore the following questions:

- How do electoral rules influence campaigns, political parties, and voter participation?
- How do the strategies of campaign professionals affect election outcomes?
- How do voters make their choices? How are voters' choices affected by campaigns?
- Who is responsible for administering elections to ensure fairness and equality?

Course Learning Outcomes and Assessments:

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to:

1. Demonstrate the ability to critique significant theoretical approaches of political science/public administration through written work.
2. Demonstrate the ability to evaluate domestic and international political/administrative policies through written work.
3. Demonstrate the ability to develop arguments about global equity and equality issues in politics through written work and oral communication.
4. Demonstrate the ability to apply appropriate statistical tools for quantitative analysis.

Course Policies

Distance Education Statement

Students enrolled in distance education courses have equal access to the university's academic support services, library resources, and instructional technology support. For more information about accessing these resources, visit the SRSU website. Students should submit online assignments through Blackboard or SRSU email, which require secure login information to verify students' identities and to protect students' information. The procedures for filing a student complaint are included in the student handbook. Students enrolled in distance education courses at Sul Ross are expected to adhere to all policies pertaining to academic honesty and appropriate student conduct, as described in the student handbook. Students in web-based courses must maintain appropriate equipment and software, according to the needs and requirements of the course, as outlined on the SRSU website.

Students with Special Needs

Any student who because of a disability may require special arrangements in order to meet course requirements should contact the instructor as soon as possible to make any necessary accommodations. If you would like to request such an accommodation, please contact the Center for Counseling and Accessibility Services, at (432) 837-8363.

Academic Integrity

Any instance of academic misconduct, such as turning in an identical written assignment for another course without approval, cheating and plagiarizing written assignments, collusion, or misrepresenting facts will be punished according to the university's disciplinary policy.

Communicating with the Professor:

The best way to contact me is through email at amoreland@sulross.edu. I will try to respond as soon as possible. If you do not receive a reply within 24 hours, please resend your email or call my office at 432.837-8162.
