Course Introduction

- ◆ What are the constitutional foundations of the American political system?
- ◆ How do rules and institutions affect the choices of political actors?
- ◆ Why and how has citizen participation changed over time?

To answer these questions, we will survey the broad literature about American politics, focusing on both classic and contemporary works in the field. Rather than focusing exclusively on contemporary issues, this course will introduce the theory and methodology used to understand US government.

Course Policies

Required Readings

- You are expected to have completed all assigned readings by the beginning of the class day for which they are assigned.

Disruptions and Classroom Respect

- You are encouraged to openly engage in class discussions, to ask questions, to share ideas, and to express your thoughts. Please be respectful of others by avoiding disruptive behaviors.

Late Work and Missed Assignments

- If you need to miss an assignment, please inform Dr. Moreland of the situation as soon as possible. Late assignments will only be allowed in the case of an emergency.

Students with Special Needs

- Any student who because of a disability may require special arrangements in order to meet course requirements should contact the instructor as soon as possible to make any necessary accommodations. If you would like to request an accommodation, please contact the Center for Counseling and Accessibility Services, at (432) 837-8363.

Religious Observance

- Any student who is absent from classes for the observance of a religious holy day will be allowed to make up assignments for that day. Arrangements for missing class due to religious observance must be made with the instructor prior to the absence.

Academic Integrity

- Any instance of academic misconduct, such as cheating and plagiarizing written assignments, collusion, or misrepresenting facts will be punished according to the university's disciplinary policy.

Distance Education Resources

- Students enrolled in distance education courses have equal access to the university's academic support services, library resources, and instructional technology support. For more information about accessing these resources, visit the SRSU website. Students should submit online assignments through Blackboard or SRSU email, which require secure login information to verify students' identities and to protect students' information. The procedures for filing a student complaint are included in the student handbook. Students enrolled in distance education courses at Sul Ross are expected to adhere to all policies pertaining to academic honesty and appropriate student conduct, as described in the student handbook. Students in web-based courses must maintain appropriate equipment and software, according to the needs and requirements of the course, as outlined on the SRSU website.
