TEACHING PHILOSOPHY

In my twenty (20) years of teaching, I have learned that the key to teaching criminal justice is to find inventive, creative, and effective ways to get students to understand the structure of the criminal justice system and the social world. I use lecture and discussion, as well as other interactive methods. I challenge students to think outside the box by presenting them with non-traditional issues and perspectives.

A key to being a successful instructor is meeting the needs of students, either instructionally or through advising. Another key to a successful instructor is the understanding that people have differences. My goal each semester and in each class is to foster a learning environment with a strong sense of discussions, creative thinking, and innovative learning methods. I believe that in order to foster such a classroom, it begins with the instructor's attitude and presentation toward students. I try to encourage and promote recognition of the value of life-long learning for both professional development and personal satisfaction.
