Course meeting times: this is a web course and does not have scheduled meeting times.

Course Description: A study of the Constitution of the United States, judicial processes and the effect of leading Supreme Court decisions on the meaning of the United States Constitution. The course emphasizes the relationship between governments and between government and the individual.

Primary Learning Objectives:

At the successful conclusion of this course, through performance on case briefs, a research paper and a final examination, the student will be able to

- Demonstrate knowledge about the Constitution; the structure of our national government; federalism and the relationship between the federal government and state governments; civil rights; criminal procedure and due process; key Supreme Court cases, including those dealing with such topics as judicial review, national supremacy, contract enforcement, implied powers, slavery, the rights of the accused, free speech, freedom of religion, gun control and health care (among others).
- Exercise critical thinking skills and demonstrate informed judgment in evaluating issues and answering questions relating to the topics listed above.
- Improve and build on sound writing skills.

Required Texts:

*To complete the requirements of this course successfully, you must be able to access documents on the Internet. You must also have a Blackboard account. See below for further details

*The materials for this course can be found online. I will also be posting PowerPoint presentations on relevant topics. You may refer to these materials, but you may not rely on them.

Distance Education Statement: Students enrolled in distance education courses have equal access to the university's academic support services, library resources, and instructional technology support. For more information about accessing these resources, visit the SRSU website. Students should submit online assignments through Blackboard or SRSU email, which require secure login information to verify students' identities and to protect students' information. The procedures for filing a student complaint are included in the student handbook. Students enrolled in distance education courses at Sul Ross are expected to adhere to all policies pertaining to academic honesty and appropriate student conduct, as described in the student handbook. Students in web-based courses must maintain appropriate equipment and software, according to the needs and requirements of the course, as outlined on the SRSU website.

ADA (Americans with Disabilities Act): Sul Ross State University is committed to equal access in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1973. It is the student's responsibility to initiate a request for accessibility services. Students who need accessibility services should contact Kathy Biddick at 830-279-3003. The address is 2623 Garner Field Road, Uvalde, TX 78801.

Course requirements, course objectives, and course grade breakdown:

*Short Written Assignments and Case Briefs (50%): This class has two short required written assignments concerning the contents of the Constitution and the rationale behind it. In addition, you will be required to provide 8 case briefs selected at your discretion from the topics below. A case brief will require you in approximately 2 pages to write a summary of a Supreme Court case that includes: (1) a brief statement of the facts of the case and its procedural history (the route it took to reach the Supreme Court); (2) the constitutional issue at stake; (3) the Supreme Court's ruling and reasoning for supporting its decision; (4) the final disposition (outcome) of the case. I have attached a sample case brief to Blackboard. Please follow this format. The case briefs must be written in your own words. Please do not extract text verbatim from the Internet or any other resource. It will be very easy for me to determine if this is or is not your own work. Plagiarism on any one of these assignments will result in a zero grade for the assignment.

*Paper (25%): The paper will require you to select a topic appropriate to this course at your discretion. The paper must make use of at least one relevant Supreme Court case and at least two works of peer-reviewed scholarship. The paper is expected to be approximately 4-5 pages in length. I am willing to entertain more substantial efforts. A successful paper must observe the conventions standard to upper division level writing in the liberal arts and the social sciences, including those pertaining to grammar, style, analysis, and citation. (APA, Chicago style or the Modern Language Association formats) are all acceptable.) Appropriate topics include: Federalism and the Marshall Court; the Supreme Court and slavery; Civil Rights and the Separate but Equal Doctrine; Substantive vs. Procedural due process; civil liberties and the Warren Court; the Supreme Court and the right to privacy; the clear and present danger test; the death penalty; prior restraint; Richard Nixon versus the United States government; the right the bear arms; the Patriot Act., the Dream Act; government mandated health care, constitutional protection for same sex unions, etc. I am more than happy to review rough drafts of the paper in advance of the due date. Plagiarism on the paper will result in a failing course grade. I reserve the right to request modifications to papers before granting final credit for the course.

Final Examination (25%): The final examination will consist of 100 multiple choice questions. The questions will be distributed in advance. Through the duration of the course, you will be responsible for finding the answers to these questions, through whatever means are available to you. You will be given two opportunities to take the test. On the first opportunity, I will indicate which questions you answered incorrectly. You will then have a second opportunity to answer the questions correctly.

Grading methodology: The 2 short assignments and 8 case briefs will be evaluated on a 20-point scale (200 points total). The research paper and final examination will be graded on a 100-point scale.

90-100 (A) 80-89 (B) 70-79 (C) 60-69 (D) <60 (F)

Plagiarism on any written assignment will result in an automatic grade of “0” for the assignment and may result in disciplinary action from the university.

Although I am giving you the maximum possible discretion to work at your own place, I urge you in the strongest possible terms to submit your work as early and as often as possible. All required work (except the Final Examination) must be submitted no later than 5 pm, Wednesday, December 2. The final examination must be completed no later than 5 pm, Wednesday, December 9. Good luck!

Assignments/Topics

Required Assignments

Short Written Assignment 1: The Constitution

Reading: Read the U.S. Constitution. The Constitution can be found on the Internet at multiple locations or in any library. It can also be found at: <http://www.archives.gov/exhibits/charters/constitution.html>. Please note that this site separates the original seven articles, the Bill of Rights and Amendments 11-27 into three separate documents. You will be expected to be familiar with all three of these documents to complete the written assignment.

Written assignment: answer the questions posted to Blackboard.
