Course description: Political Science 2305, Federal Government, is an introduction to the governmental institutions and governmental/political processes of the United States of America. The course will begin with an introduction to political theory. Political Science 2305 is required to meet core curriculum requirements.

Student learning outcomes:

Upon successful completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- Demonstrate a basic understanding of selected concepts of selected political philosophers;
- Demonstrate an understanding of the major institutions of U. S. government and the processes associated with the institutions;
- Demonstrate an understanding of the relationship between governmental institutions and politically relevant non-governmental groups, e.g., political parties, the media, interest groups;
- Demonstrate an understanding of selected policy challenges facing the United States government.

Core Curriculum Objectives:

- To develop and promote an awareness of the importance of social responsibility, personal responsibility, critical thinking, and communication.

Program learning outcomes:

- Demonstrate knowledge of significant theoretical approaches of political science through written work and oral communication;
- Demonstrate the ability to analyze domestic and international political processes in written work and oral communication;
- Demonstrate the ability to develop arguments about global equity and equality issues in politics through written work and oral communication.

Teacher certification requirements.

Political Science 2305 addresses the following competencies for teacher certification:

- Texas Domain III, Competency 19: The teacher understands and applies social science knowledge and skills to plan, organize, and implement learning and assess learning;
- Texas Domain III, Competency 23: The teacher understands and applies knowledge of concepts of government, democracy, and citizenship, including ways that individuals and groups achieve their goals through political systems.

Marketable skills.

- Students can effectively communicate ideas and information verbally, visually, and in writing;
- Students can distinguish between credible/relevant information and information lacking credibility/relevance;
- Students can identify critical and common institutions of political decision-making and policy-making across different nation-state settings;
- Students can engage with social and political problems and use critical thinking to develop logical solutions.

Course evaluation.

- Unit Examinations. There will be three unit examinations. The examinations will be comprised of a multiple choice section that will be administered in-class and an essay portion that will be an out-of-class assignment. Due dates for the essays will be announced at the time of the examination. The material covered on the exams will be from the text and from the class lectures. The lowest of the three unit exams will be dropped from the exam average;
- Make-up Exams will be given the last day of class;
- There will be a comprehensive final examination given at the end of the semester during Final Exam week. The final exam will be given to students who wish to raise their course averages;
- There will be a series of very brief paragraph assignments in which the student will be asked to bring information to help develop the class period. Examples are “Why Government,” “Authoritarian Leaders,” and “News Commentators” (10%).

Attendance—or Course Progress.

I recommend logging in every week to stay current with the course.

Disabilities Accommodation.

It is SRSU policy to provide reasonable accommodation to students with disabilities. If you would like to request such accommodation because of a physical, mental, or learning disability, please contact Accessibilities Services Coordinator, in Ferguson 112 or at (432) 837-8203.
