Attendance & Class Participation

Your attention to and participation in this asynchronous course are reflected in your grade. Please be proactive in informing the professor of any expected absences in advance in order to meet class requirements. Please note that the instructor can see when and for how long you log into classes, and work, including discussion boards, are all time-stamped. If work is turned in late, ten points will be deducted from the grade, regardless of how late the work is, unless the late work is excused as defined in the student handbook or extended prior to the due date of assignment. I do not take late work of any kind beyond the final examination period.

Assignments

The course will consist of three major assignment areas, which are described briefly below. More detailed assignments will be made available to you (i.e. the portfolio and the introductory essay).

Discussion Boards: Discussion boards allow us to “talk” to one another. Think of them as our class discussion if this were a face-to-face class. In addition, the announcements section is where I will present lecture materials and answer questions. Beware that your discussion boards are a graded form of writing. This necessitates mindfulness to correctness and adhering to the assignment. Discussion Boards are due each Tuesday by 11:55 p.m. Replies are due Thursdays at 11:55 p.m.

Journal Elements: The journal elements will be brief essays (500 words) on topics associated with the course progression and are listed in the syllabus. They will work toward your professionalization and self-analysis of academic development and professional aspirations.

Portfolio Capstone Seminar Spring 2023

They will also help develop your expository writing skills. The journal elements will be turned in as one Word document at the assignments link in Blackboard at end of term.

Introductory Essay: The introductory essay will be turned in twice, once as its own document at the assignments link in Blackboard and then again with the portfolio. The elaborated assignment will appear at the assignments link.

Portfolio: The full portfolio will feature examples of work achieved in your academic journey at Sul Ross State University in English courses. The journal will be turned in to the Blackboard Portfolio link in our course Blackboard at the end of term. The full and elaborated assignment will appear at the assignments link.

Assessment of English Majors

Rationale: The Coordinating Board of the Texas State University System requires that all departments provide some form of assessment of their majors. In the fall of 1994 the Department of Languages and Literature implemented a portfolio system of evaluation for English majors.

Portfolio's Contents: Each portfolio should contain a wide variety of assignments. We are requesting that you submit four papers written for different English professors and that you include three essay exams from specified literature classes (seven papers, total):

- ❖ One Expository Writing Sample (e.g. a personal essay on a nonliterary topic): This paper should have no sources and may take the form of a memoir/narrative essay or an essay in one of the rhetorical modes—comparison/contrast or argument, for example. You might choose a paper you have written in Eng. 1301, 1302, or 3312.
- ❖ One Critical/Analytical Writing Sample (e.g. a critical analysis of a literary work—short story, poem, or play): This paper should have no sources other than the literary work. You might choose a paper you have written for any literature class.
- ❖ One Research Paper (e.g. a paper using quotes and paraphrases from critical sources, with MLA citations and documentation): You might choose a paper from a literature class or from Eng. 1302 or 3312.
- ❖ One Creative Work (completed in an English class): This may include poetry, fiction, a media project, photo essay, or any other strongly original project.
- ❖ One Essay Exam (this may come from any of your English courses): This essay exam must have been written in a timed, classroom setting.
- ❖ One Daily Project/Assignment (this may come from any of your English courses): This may include from journal entries, discussion boards, analytic answers to prompts, creative invention exercises, etc.).

Portfolio's Form: The document should present as if you were placing the documents in a binder and creating a title page and a table of contents (however, we will be presenting it in electronically via Blackboard. On the title page, give your name and the date. The table of contents should identify the type of assignment, the title of the paper or exam, the course, and the instructor. Please be sure that you include papers that have been marked and graded by the professor; we are interested in seeing how you have been evaluated as well as seeing the work, itself, If you have printed assignment instructions for any of your papers, include those, as well.

Portfolio Self-Assessment Essay: Immediately after your Table of Contents, include an introductory essay that pulls together your academic experience and also introduces the works presented in the portfolio. This will be approximately 2 pages. You may address the following: 1) Of the six papers in your portfolio, which three do you feel were your most successful? What made them successful? 2) Overall, how well do you feel that you have mastered the goals of your academic career? Broad goals might include, for example, ability to craft well-written and well-documented papers, conduct research, and think creatively or analytically.

Assignment:

Portfolio Introduction

Immediately after your Table of Contents, include a self-assessment essay of one to three pages in length. This essay will serve to introduce the portfolio, and, more importantly, prove to be a personal narrative of you as a graduating English major.

In the essay, you will address the following: 1) Of the six papers in your portfolio, which three do you feel were your most successful? What made them successful? And, conversely, where do you feel your writing and scholarship could have improved? 2) Overall, how well do you feel that you have mastered the goals of assessment laid out in the rubric for portfolio assessment? (Broad goals might include, for example, ability to craft well-written and well-documented papers, conduct research, and think creatively or analytically.)

In addition, you may wish to review your time at Sul Ross and your aspirations as you move forward. The challenge of the essay is to think critically and to analyze your academic experiential progression, while also exuding your own life.

The introduction should certainly be a personal narrative. As such, it might take various directions to reflect your journey and you as a writer and scholar.

The essay should be written in Times New Roman, 12 pt. font, double spaced. It will be assessed for its rhetorical effectiveness (to include the correctness of writing).
