Section I. Introduction

This course examines the major themes and works of the revolutionary era, with focus on the Atlantic World. Each week in this class, we will read and discuss important books and articles on the evolution of life in the age of revolutions and the major scholarly debates of historians regarding this era, including how a revolution is defined. We will highlight the great changes that took place in America during this time and the sweeping effects that they had on everyday life.

Each week, you will be expected to participate in discussion in detail over the assigned readings for the week. Through this analysis, we will examine the content presented by the authors as well as the evidence upon which they base their arguments. We will also discuss how each work fits within ongoing historical debates about the topic and/or theme of the readings.

Course Content Disclaimer

At times this semester we will be discussing historical events that may be disturbing, even traumatizing, to some students. If you suspect that specific material is likely to be emotionally challenging for you, I'd be happy to discuss any concerns you may have. Likewise, if you ever wish to discuss your reactions to course material with the class or with me individually afterwards, I welcome such discussions as an appropriate part of our classwork.

Section II. Learning Objectives

Student Learning Outcomes

SLO 1—The history student will demonstrate historical research skills in a logically organized, written paper that is mechanically correct and supported by relevant documentation of historical content.

Marketable skills— Students can identify useful resources from a pool of data.
Students can select and organize data in a relevant manner.

The Age of Revolutions

Students can make written presentations to various audiences.

SLO 2—The history student will demonstrate the ability to write about topics in historiography and how those topics are interpreted.

Marketable skills— Students can utilize data to persuade various audiences.
Students can utilize data to generate and strengthen ideas.
Students can decipher stances adopted by various individuals.

SLO 3—The history student will demonstrate knowledge of historical events, movements, major turning points and personalities of the past.

Marketable Skills— Students can meet deadlines in a successful manner.
Students can discharge responsibilities in an adequate manner.
Students can manage the absorption of data.

- Technology—This is an online course, which means that you must have regular, reliable access to a working computer with internet. Students are responsible for checking email and the Blackboard site on a regular basis to access course materials and information.
 - Accountability—Think of this course like joining a gym—you get out what you put in. As your professor, it is my responsibility to make sure you know how to use the equipment and to assist you when you need a spotter. Meanwhile, it is your responsibility to engage with the course materials, put in the work, and complete the assignments by the designated due dates. The grade you earn is determined by the quality of your effort, not necessarily the time you spend.

THE 5 C'S OF HISTORICAL REASONING

1. Change and Continuity: Historians are required to debate what has changed over time and what has remained the same. Change can be a dramatic pivot or a slow shift.
2. Causation: Historians debate the causes of historical events. It would be more accurate to say that we often discuss about causality, sometimes passionately. Few events have only one cause (monocausal), so we debate with one another about which cause should be considered the most important.
3. Context: Historians insist that the past must be understood on its own terms. Any historical event, person, idea must be placed in the context of its historical era to be interpreted. The historian's goal is to discover how people in the past understood their own lives, which is often quite different from how we may react to their situation.

4. Contingency and Connections: Historians are aware that events happen for a variety of reasons, which are often interconnected. Change one factor, and the event might not have happened at all. This idea helps us to remember that historical events are not inevitable.
5. Complexity: Historical reasoning is not about memorizing dates and names. It is about making sense of the messiness of the past, in all its complexity. That often means recognizing that different historical groups experienced events in different ways.

Section IV. Grades

A 90-100% B 80-89% C 70-79% D 60-69% F 59% or lower

- Five Book Reviews (10% each, 50% of the semester grade): Students will write and submit précis, or scholarly reviews, over assigned reading.
 - Précis should be 2-3 full, double-spaced page, in 12-point Times New Roman font, with one-inch margins on all sides. For examples of a scholarly review (otherwise known as a précis), see: www.h-net.org/reviews/
 - A précis should summarize a given book or article's argument, scope, and methodology as clearly and concisely as possible. Some reviews may require students to write a comparative analysis of multiple readings. Your review should evaluate the effectiveness of the book or article(s) as well as its limitations.
 - The purpose of a scholarly review is to both summarize the books or article's contents and, more importantly, to critically evaluate its contribution to knowledge, both factual and historiographical. The reviewer's priority is to critically appraise each book; to analyze it on its own terms, to discuss what it did and did not do, what sort of evidence the author used and how well, what its strengths and weaknesses were. Be sure to point out the thesis of each book and whether the author presented a supported a persuasive argument. Try to ascertain what kind of historiographical context (if any) the author provided—in other words, how did the author's work fit into a broader body of historical literature? If the author did not do this, hold them to task. For examples of scholarly book reviews, see: www.h-net.org/reviews
- Final Paper (50%): To measure the success of student acquisition of these mandated skills, one assignment during the semester will require critical analysis of an historical event in nineteenth-century American history. Each student will utilize a selection of primary and/or secondary sources to interpret and evaluate, place in historical context, and utilize to construct an analytical essay. The essay will require that students think critically about the sources, examine how individual choices and decisions influenced the course of history, and consider the ways in which individuals engage with regional, national, and/or global communities.
 - You must consult with your professor about potential research topics prior to making your final decision. You may choose any subject relevant to the theme and chronology of this course. This essay must have a strong, coherent thesis statement, which will be supported by a minimum 10 scholarly sources, at least 7 of which must - be scholarly books. These may include works from the required, supplemental, and/or recommended reading lists.

- Essays must be typed or word-processed in 12-point fonts (Times New Roman, Arial, or Calibri), double-spaced, with one-inch margins all around.
 - All papers should be a minimum 8-12 full pages (not including a cover page and works cited) and will be evaluated on style and content; therefore, they should be well-written and free of grammatical errors. Papers that are not formatted according to guidelines and requirements will be dropped one letter grade automatically.
 - Papers will be evaluated on the following:
 - strength of your historical arguments and content
 - how well you have used historical evidence to support your argument(s)—the 5C's of Historical Reasoning (see above)
 - composition (i.e., spelling, grammar, sentence structure)
 - form (i.e., correct citation, Chicago Manual of Style or Turabian format)

Section IV. Classroom & Teaching Philosophy

A Climate of Mutual Respect

Importantly, this class will foster free expression, critical investigation, and the open discussion of ideas. This means that all of us must help create and sustain an atmosphere of tolerance, civility, and respect for the viewpoints of others. Similarly, we must all learn how to probe, oppose, and disagree without resorting to tactics of intimidation, harassment, or personal attack. No one is entitled to harass, belittle, or discriminate against another on the basis of race, religion, ethnicity, age, gender, national origin, or sexual preference. Still, we will not be silenced by the difficulty of fruitfully discussing politically sensitive issues.

Student Support

I aim to create a learning environment for my students that supports various perspectives and experiences. I understand that the recent pandemic, economic disparity, and health concerns, or even unexpected life events may impact the conditions necessary for you to succeed. My commitment is to be there for you and help you meet the learning objectives of this course. I do this to demonstrate my commitment to you and to the mission of Sul Ross State University to create an inclusive environment and care for the whole student as part of the Sul Ross Familia. If you feel like your performance in the class is being impacted by your experiences outside of class, please don't hesitate to come and talk with me. I want to be a resource for you.

Section V. Policies

Grading

While I am always happy to discuss ways to improve your writing and performance on exams, I am not in the business of haggling over grades. Grades in this class are the product of careful deliberation and are not negotiable. If you find that the instructor—who is human—made a mathematical error, please bring the matter to my attention during office hours.

The Age of Revolutions

Academic Integrity

Students in this class are expected to demonstrate scholarly behavior and academic honesty in the use of intellectual property. Students should submit work that is their own and avoid the temptation to engage in behaviors that violate academic integrity, such as turning in work as original that was used in whole or part for another course and/or professor; turning in another person's work as one's own; copying from professional works or internet sites without citation; collaborating on a course assignment, examination, or quiz when collaboration is forbidden. Students should also avoid using open AI sources unless permission is expressly given for an assignment or course. Violations of academic integrity can result in failing assignments, failing a class, and/or more serious university consequences. These behaviors also erode the value of college degrees and higher education overall.
