COURSE DESCRIPTION

This class is a production workshop in the art of Documentary Filmmaking. Documentaries are unique in the world of film in that the form is wide open, and most often dictated by the discoveries made by the filmmakers in the process of making the film. The topics, themes, construction, and resulting films are as varied as the breadth and depth of human experience. Where fiction films are written, planned, and then executed, Documentaries are planned, executed, and only then are they written.

In this class, students will plan, produce, and edit individual short documentaries. Any topic is open for the creative process – the focus is on finding the story the student wants to tell, followed by the practical process of turning the story idea into a movie.

Now we've reached the second part of the class. Post Production. Post, as you'll see, is where the heavy lifting of documentary work happens. While the production of the documentary – the shooting – was a major part, the editing of the documentary ultimately determines what story you're telling. Additional shoots or interviews, as well as voiceover recording, are often part of the post production workflow.

CLASS ATTENDANCE

Regular class attendance is important to the attainment of the educational objectives of the University. Each instructor will keep class attendance records, and the instructor's policy on class attendance will be explained at the beginning of the semester or term.

The instructors will drop a student from a course when the student has a total of nine absences. A student will be dropped for excessive absences in remedial courses after nine absences.

An absence is defined as non-attendance in fifty minutes of class; for example, non-attendance in a one and one-half hour class will constitute one and one-half absences and non-attendance in a three-hour class will constitute three absences. An absence because of participation in an official University activity is considered to be an authorized absence.
